MONDAY, JUNE 9, 1913.

The Yankee youngsters are proving themselves not slow at the game of tennis.

It isn't summer yet, anyway—and won't be till the last of next week. So what's the use of kicking about the winter?

Some day all the grade crossings in Vermont will be abolished, and there won't be any chance for such an accident as that which happened near Northfield yesterday.

The Harvard crew is made up of heirs to $45,000,000. It is a good sign that so many sons of the rich should take to such hard physical sport as intercollegiate rowing, but it is remarkable that the sons of so many millionaires should get into a single boat. It is up to this crew to show there was no favoritism and that they are handling the oars because of their ability.

The alleged attempt to bribe a juror in the Lawrence dynamite conspiracy case is one of the most serious charges that can be made because the alleged offense strikes at the foundation of the social fabric of the world. If the integrity of the judicial system is impaired in ever so slight a degree it will be bad for the stability of government.

One by one, the colleges of the United States are announcing the completion of "million-dollar endowments." Trinity college at Durham, N. C., closely following Smith college in this respect. The private institutions are being forced to build these breastworks in view of the fact they will be in educational competition with state institutions which receive annual and perpetual aid from the state. And, too, it is a splendid investment albeit the returns may not come into the pockets of those who are making the generous contributions to the endowment funds; efforts of this sort should meet with success everywhere.

The United Commercial Travelers' Association of New England is reported to have been very much pleased with the reception accorded it in Rutland last week. We hope that the association was so well satisfied that it will wish to return to Vermont again and again for its meetings—whether to Rutland or to some other place, it makes little difference to Vermont. The main thing is to get the traveling men to come into the state, for they will go out and spread good news after seeing what the state has to show them and after experiencing the hospitality of the people of the state. The more these conventions come to Vermont the better it will be for the upbuilding of the state, for no better agents of publicity are abroad than commercial travelers.

The suits instituted by storekeepers in London for damage sustained when their show windows were smashed by militant suffragettes are the natural outgrowth of an outrage, for the storekeepers themselves were not to be blamed for any failure of the suffragettes to get the ballot but they simply were one small part of organized society which had not seen fit to grant the ballot to the women. The storekeepers had to stand the brunt of the first attacks of the disgruntled women because they happened to be the most exposed to damage, for the smashing of show windows permits a spectacular entry into the publicity items of daily life as readily as any one other single outbreak. As a result, the storekeepers of London were forced to stand a great expense because of the wanton fury of the disappointed women, or the insurance companies were forced so stand the expense if the storekeepers carried insurance on their windows. It was deliberate perversion of law and flagrant disregard of the rights of individuals under organized society. Hence, there is justice back of the suits which are being entered against several of the English suffragette leaders.

BURNS CLUB PICNIC

Opened the Summer Festivities at Caledonia Park, Saturday.

The picnic season of 1913 was inaugurated Saturday afternoon at Caledonia park when the Barre Burns club observed their annual picnic and outing. About 150 people, including members of the club and their families and invited friends, gathered at the amusement resort during the day and rarely has an afternoon of merry-making been conducted by the admirers of the great Scottish bard more satisfactorily than Saturday's outing.

Shortly after noon a special train was sent over the Montpelier & Wells River railroad.

Scattered throughout the park were booths, manned by a competent corps of men, who were busily engaged during their brief sojourn at the grounds. The following was dispensed from the stands: Peanuts, pop-corn, candy, fruit, ice cream, sandwiches, soda and coffee.

Athletic sports and dancing commanded the attention during the greater portion of the afternoon and the park pavilion was eagerly beset by dancers, who glided over the floor to the strains of the Barre opera house orchestra. The orchestra was composed of Lyle Perry, cello; Edmund Sanborn, violin; and Karl Forsell, cornet. Upon request, Karl Forsell rendered several pleasing interpretations of "highland" music to the approbation of the admirers of "Bobbie Burns." Among those rendered were "Annie Laurie," "Blue Bells of Scotland," "Ye Banks and Braes of Bonnie Doon" and "Auld Lang Syne." In order to secure exit from the grounds, the cornetist resorted to "Darling, I Am Growing Old," and was granted permission to leave.

The afternoon's list of track events and their results are as follows:

Junior girls' race—Won by Eva Chesser; second, Anna McDonald.

Senior girls' race—Won by Dorothy Wyllie; second, Violet Lillie; third, Madeline Scott.

Boys' race—Won by Fred Bird; second, L. Lillie; third, Harold Morrison.

Young ladies' race—Won by Miss Lillie; second, Miss Warnitt; third, Miss Bell Thompson.

Married ladies' race—Won by Mrs. Robert Stewart; second, Mrs. William Scott and John Chesser.

Place kick for ladies—Won by Mrs. Francis Thompson; second, Miss Isabella Scott; third, Mrs. James Mitchell.

These sports were successfully conducted under the supervision of William Scott and John Chesser.

Owing to the unfavorable condition of the grounds, the annual football battle, rated as one of the best and which lends great interest to the annual outing, was deferred until some later date. William Scott issued an edict that the grass was too high to attempt to start the contest.

The big attraction of the afternoon was a baseball game between teams captained by Angus McDonald, president of the club, and by James Mitchell, the vice-president of the organization. The game was won by the latter team by a score of 5 to 3, after 10 innings of the most exciting and desperate ball ever played on the field. The game was admirably handled by William Scott, whose fame as an indicator holder has long been spread broadcast. Not a whimper was rendered against the decisions of Scott.

William Morrison of the losing team featured the afternoon with an alleged home run. William Emslie failed to show his old time form at first base for the McDonald aggregation and was a sore disappointment to the spectators, who were anticipating great things of him. The line-up of the winning team was as follows: Joe Will, pitcher; James Hogg, catcher; James Mitchell, first base; William Coutts, second base; James Stephens, third base; George Cornick, shortstop; Villia Stephens, James Patterson and James Booth, outfielders. The personnel of the defeated team comprised the following players: John Chesser, pitcher; G. Cooper, catcher; William Emslie, first base; Robert Stewart, second base; J. Anderson, shortstop; Leslie Creighton, shortstop; William Morrison, James Lamont and John McDonald, outfielders.

It was chiefly through the consistent pitching of the old football player, Joe Will, that the vice-president's outfit was able to leave the field victorious. Before departing from the field, the funmakers enjoyed a repast of "parfaits," prepared and served by Adam Craig. There was not a dissenting vote to the general approbation of the sumptuous feast. It was with great difficulty that Craig was able to secure a batch of "parfaits."

The committee in charge of the outing was composed of the following: Angus McDonald, president of the club; James Mitchell, vice-president; James Hogg, treasurer; Robert Inglis, secretary; John Chesser, William Coutts, James Hogg, Adam Craig and James Booth.

He spoke thoughtfully of the book, the man and nature as sources of mental and moral inspiration.

CONTESTING THE ESTATE

Two Sons of Elizabeth Thorpe, Late of Charlotte, Not Satisfied.

Barlington, June 9.—The appeal taken in probate court from the will of the late Elizabeth Thorpe of Charlotte was entered Saturday by two sons of the deceased, who are dissatisfied with the provisions, which leave nearly all of the property to another son and his wife and children. The will of Mrs. Thorpe bequeathed to Rose Thorpe, wife of her son Emerson Thorpe, the sum of $800; to her grand-daughter, Elizabeth Thorpe, a black walnut chamber suit; to her grandson, Ray E. Thorpe, a black walnut parlor table and book case; to another grandson, Harold I. Thorpe, a hat rack, wicker arm chair and single sleigh; to her son, Herbert C. Thorpe, the remainder of her furniture, and to her son, Emerson Thorpe, father of the grandchildren, mentioned, the sum of $700. The residue of the estate is divided equally between three grandchildren, who are the sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Thorpe. The contestants, who are Herbert C. Thorpe of Charlotte and E. H. Thorpe of Brooklyn, N. Y., set up the usual grounds of undue influence and unsound mentality. The bond of the executor is fixed at $5,000, and that is about the size of the estate.

Burying a Water Supply.

Most rodents are provident creatures and store a supply of food for winter use. The Egyptian jerboa, which is a kind of jumping mouse, is quite as thrifty as the rest of its race, but it is singular in this—that it stores up not food, but water. The jerboa is found most generally in arid regions, in which the dry season lasts six months, during which time not even a drop of dew falls. In these places, however, there grows, just at the close of the rainy season, a bitter but extremely juicy melon. As soon as it is ripe the jerboa gnaws through its stem, digs away the earth beneath it and lets it drop into the hole thus formed. The wind soon covers it with sand, which not only conceals it, but also protects it from the heat. On the coming of the drought the jerboa seeks out one after another of these natural water barrels and slakes its thirst at them until the rainy season sets in once more. As the jerboa lays up a supply of from forty to fifty melons, there is no danger of its store of water running short.

Canaries.

Canaries are instinctively the most cleanly of all pets. They never drink from their bathing tub if provided with a filled drinking cup and unless they have been frightened by chilled or too cold water will bathe every day.

—Woman's Home Companion.

Bears a Boomerang. "My wife made me promise to quit smoking before she would marry me," remarked Mr. Meekton.

"And now?" "I'm doing my very best to get her to promise not to begin."—Washington Star.
